

Cousin Sal Delivers Pizza

Sal dresses up in a local pizza parlor's outfit and delivers to people who have ordered it. When he arrives, he asks what the person is doing and asks if he can do it with them. If they say no, he whips out a huge jar of anchovies and threatens to add it to their pizza. He spends time with them doing whatever they're doing – watching TV and movies (he ruins endings, keeps asking who every character is); doing homework (makes up crazy answers, tries to talk the student out of doing it and into going out drinking with him); reading (asks that they read to him, complains that the person is really boring, starts reading the Playboy he brought with him). He eats up all of their pizza. In some cases, he didn't like the kind of pizza they ordered, so he brought what he likes instead. He also shows up at people's houses who have not ordered pizza and insists that they take it, as long as he can stay with them and eat it, too. The final shots are of him and the earlier student eating pizza as they go into a bar. Inside, Matt Damon is in the background in a different pizza place's outfit with someone else drinking and eating pizza. He sees Sal's outfit and lectures to him about economics like he did in "Good Will Hunting".